One magnificent evening, the 30th July (that three weeks after our departure), the frigate was abreast of Cape Blanc, thirty miles to leeward of the coast of Patagonia. We had crossed the tropic of Capricorn, and the Straits of Magellan opened less than seven hundred miles to the south. Before the days were over the Abraham Lincoln would be ploughing the waters of the Pacific. Seated on the deck, I naturally led up the conversation to the giant unicorn, and examined the various chances of success or failure of the expedition. But, seeing that Ned Lincoln, without saying too much himself, I pressed him more closely. “Well, Ned,” said I, “is it possible you are not convinced of the existence of this cetacean that we are following? Have you any particular reason for being so incredulous?” The harpooner looked at me fixedly for some moments before answering, struck his broad forehead with his hand (a habit of his), as if to collect himself, and said at last, “Perhaps I have, Mr. Lincoln.”

En activant l'option « petites capitales » les lettres bas-de-casse sont transformées en petites capitales et les chiffres alignés en chiffres elzéviens.
L'option « tout en petites capitales » disponible dans l'onglet OpenType convertira également les capitales en petites capitales.
La position et les approches de la ponctuation sont automatiquement corrigées pour s'adapter aux petites capitales quand vous sélectionnez l'une ou l'autre de ces options.
